with headquarters at Fränkfort, was here Friday and Saturday and with County Live Stock Inspector, Hledsoe, Bailey, made a tour of the county and found stock in general in good condition. The sheep of the county are remarkably free from ticks, scabies, etc., he reports. Mr. Moore spoke very highly of the work of Mr. Bailey in giving to the farmers the directions by which stock can be kept in good shape and of his endeavors to insure that the law governing the shipment of stock is being enforced. There is, Mr. Moore reports a disinclination on the part of many farmers to dip their sheep, which he says would be of great value in making sheep strong, and less liable to disease and give them greater power to resist attack should an epidemic occur.

GOVERNMENT AID FOR ROADS

The United States has spent hundreds of millions in Cuba, Porto Rico and the Philippines, in constructing roads and even railroads and bridges, while the amount which has been, and will yet be spent for the Panama Canal, will stagger computation.

If half of this immense sum had been used in the construction of highways, in the various States, how much greater the benefit would be to the people of this country, who have supplied the money for these vast improvements in foreign lands. If the government had the right, under the constitution to apply its revenue to these gigantic enterprises, why has it not the power to apply a like amount in building roads and bridges, in the various States?

Hundreds of millions have been spent in widening and deepening harbors and bays, on our seaboard. This is right, because these harbors and bays are the highways of commerce. But are not the roads in the States, also the highways of commerce? To improve these bays and harbors, increases our commerce; but if the roads are constructed and improved, will this not benefit our commerce also? Is nothing traffic except that moved in ships or on railroads, entitled to be called commerce? Before the railroads were built a large part of the traffic of the country passed over the highways. If these roads were made better, and others built, a large part of this traffic would be still moved over them to market.

Kentucky is bubbling with enthusiasm for good roads. Why cannot our Senators and Representatives stop the tedious and unprofitable discussion about Lorimer and other kindred topics, long enough to present a bill which will authorize government aid to roads in the States? The government aids schools and colleges, and has given vast quantities of the public lands to great railroads in the past? It has built great dams to water the lands of the west. It has locked and dammed many rivers, in aid of the commerce of the States. Why cannot it aid the building of the country, where there are no rivers? The vast majority of the people do not live on or even near enough to the harbors, bays, or rivers to be locally benefited by their improvement. The rivers bays and harbors are highways for commerce, and so are turnpikes. If the one can be improved by the government, why may not the other?

Gentlemen of the Senate and House of Representatives, (especially from Kentucky,) we are looking and waiting to hear from you. You can all speak at once, if you desire, but he who speaks first and more effectively, will do more to earn his salary and with it, the lasting gratitude of our people than any man who has ever represented Kentucky in the Congress of the United States.

The country press wants to make the nomination and election of Peter Lee Atherton as a member of the Legislature unanimous. Evidently Mr. Atherton has some warm friends among the newspaper fraternity.—Argus in Louisville Herald.

The Interior Journal's portion of the country press does not. While Mr. Atherton is undoubtedly a splendid gentleman and well qualified to hold a legislative or any other such position of honor, we do not believe he would make the sort of representative with an eye single to the best interests of the people. We were on the ground at the legislative session of 1914 and Mr. Atherton was one of the very busiest lobbyists there, who were seeking to defeat the plan of Gov. Beckham to place an equitable gallon tax upon the whiskey rectifiers of the State. Mr. Atherton in the legislature would be, to our mind, very much like Cannon or Aldrich in Congress. They are for the interests and not for the people.

A PEEK INTO HIS POCKET would show the box of Bucklen's Arnica Salve that E. S. Loper, a carpenter, of Marquette, N. Y., always carries. VALENTINE, WARDEN HANDLER AND ROSE LANE

"Nothing can separate us," confidently.

"Let that be our prayer to all the gods. But this I want you to remember—from my soul I love you. Now go."

She kissed her hand and waved it toward him as she went out of the door.

"Goodby, Rose."

He stood a moment; then, taking down the telephone receiver, he said into the mouthpiece:

"Hello. All right. Send the gentleman in." After a pause: "What? He's gone into Mr. Lane's office? The telephone receiver fell to the desk with a crash. Doyle went into the office of Mr. Lane, Rose's father; here was a new complication, a new danger, one which Jimmy Valentine had not included in his calculations. Well, come what may, he must face the situation.

"Miss Taylor—Miss Mabel," he called, taking up the receiver and asking for the "central" of the bank's private exchange, "give me Mr. Lane's office. Hello, Mr. Lane. Oh, now regarding that Germond note, he says that he—Oh, you are coming into my office now with a Mr. Doyle? All right. I'll be here. Very well. Goodby."

The receiver clattered into its wonted position on the hook, and Jimmy Valentine stood at his desk awaiting the arrival of Rose Lane's father and Detective George Doyle.

CHAPTER XIV.

AFTER a few moments Valentine again glanced at the photograph of the dinner group. Next he opened a drawer at his left and took out a square green book with the legend "Scrap Book" in fancy green letters on its cover.

He placed the volume in a drawer at the right of his desk and on top of it laid several other books taken from another drawer. He skimmed the drawer shut, straightened himself and walked across the office to the table on which was laid the tray of gold, silver and greenbacks.

"I'm going to beat you, Mr. Doyle," he said fiercely, half aloud. "I'm going to beat you, and I'm going to make you like it."

He seated himself before the tray and began counting the money as the door opened to admit Mr. Lane, followed by Detective Doyle.

Valentine looked up.

"Mr. Randall," began Rose's father, "this is Mr. Doyle, a detective, who has been asking me some questions about you that I feel you can better answer."

"Indeed?" looking at Doyle. "What is the name?" Valentine asked innocently.

His attitude made Doyle snort with anger.

"Doyle," the detective grunted impatiently, staring at the man he had known as No. 1289.

Valentine rose and shook hands with Doyle. "Glad to know you, Mr. Doyle."

He seated himself before the tray.

"Well, what can I do for you?" he asked.

The detective's mouth gaped open. He glared at the smoothly speaking, indifferently acting ex-convict before him, then at the tray containing thousands of dollars in bills and coin.

Valentine went on counting the money as unconcernedly as though playing a game of jackstraws with Bobby or Kitty.

"What can you do?" exploded Doyle.

"You can do nine years for"—

"You will excuse me," interrupted Mr. Lane, stepping toward the door.

"I have no interest in the conversation, I am sure. And, Mr. Doyle," he said pointedly to the bewildered detective, "I want you to thoroughly understand that I have every confidence in Mr. Randall, as also have all the other directors." The door closed behind him.

blind him and Valentine was alone with George Doyle.

"Well, I'll be blowed!" ejaculated Doyle, turning again to the assistant cashier. "You're in pretty sweet here, aren't you?" pointing to the tray. "I really didn't expect to find you here in the daytime."

"Why?" perplexed.

"Oh, I thought you'd duck when you got my wire."

"Wire? Oh, did you send that telegram?"

"Yes, Jimmy."

"Jimmy? What's the idea? I don't follow you."

"Oh, you don't know, eh?" angrily

"Got the old boy—Lane—stalling for you, and you're going pretty strong, eh?"

"Exactly what do you mean?" asked Valentine indignantly, rising as he spoke.

"Come on, Jimmy, not with me. Sorry to hear you away from so soft a place, but the state of Massachusetts wants you."

"From the occasional words of intelligible English you speak from time to time," rejoined Valentine easily, "I gather that you imagine I am a person named Jimmy." His words were accompanied by the most aggravating of smiles.

The now thoroughly irate detective bent toward the assistant cashier and peered intently at him.

"Imagine—imagine! Well, isn't it funny that I should imagine your name to be Jimmy?"

"It is, indeed," snarled. "As a matter of curiosity, might I ask Jimmy's other name?"

"I'll give you just one guess," pointedly.

"That's exceedingly kind of you, but this same experience having happened before I will likely guess it." He settled back comfortably in his chair.

"Well, what do you think of that?" Doyle found it difficult to control his temper.

"Well, what is the other name?" Valentine responded with the utmost coolness:

"You mistake me for a Mr. Valentine."

"Jimmy Valentine, the very name, and you are Jimmy Valentine, and I want you," snarled the detective.

"Now, is it come along or requisition?"

"Oh, I'm to be arrested for this Jimmy Valentine, am I? The last time I was mistaken for him I was only embarrassed by having a tough on the street in Chicago claim my acquaintance. You are really amusing, Mr. Doyle." The assistant cashier chuckled softly.

"So that's your game, eh?"

"No game that I can see."

"I suppose you are going to deny that Bill Avery called on you today?"

Doyle watched the other intently to note the effect of this shot. But Valentine was entirely equal to the occasion.

"I do not know your friend Bill, Mr. Doyle," positively.

"No," exasperatedly. "Then a man with iron gray hair, wearing a top hat and carrying a cane, did not get off a train here today and come straight here?"

"It is not possible for me to know how the men get here who call on me. Such a man as you describe, however, did call on me. But that man's name was—er—" He crossed to his desk, paused, glanced perplexedly at Doyle and then reached to the telephone.

"I forgot for the moment, but they likely will know outside. Hello! Do you recall the name of the last man who called on me today? No, not Mr. Doyle; he's here now. Cronin, that's it. Thank you." He hung up the receiver. "Cronin," he added, "He came in here a short time ago to negotiate a loan."

"GLAD TO KNOW YOU, MR. DOYLE"

"Cronin?" gasped Doyle. "So he's taken a new moniker, too, has he? And he came to negotiate a loan from Banker Jimmy Valentine? Well, if that isn't rich! I do wish Warden Handler could be here today to hear you pull off this little stunt. I always told him you were too good for the safe breaking game. You ought to be an actor or a United States senator. You're wasting your time in this business."

"I appreciate your compliments, but I really quite fail to understand you," Valentine spoke sharply. "Your attitude is trying my patience, Mr. Doyle. I am a very busy man, with large responsibilities, and as this conversation is entirely frivolous—frivolous, I say—I must regret to fully inform you that I must continue on my day's work."

He added toward the tray of currency. "Believe me, I am perfectly willing to do what any citizen should do to help apprehend a criminal, but I must ask you—"

"Oh, b—l. Valentine, do you think I've lost my eyesight? You're Jimmy Valentine, and that was Bill Avery who called on you. I guessed he knew where you were and had him watched, and the first trip he made I followed him. Now, cut it out and declare yourself. Do you come, or do I get requisition papers and take you?" His manner became as threatening as his words.

LOUISVILLE LAWYER DIES SUDDENLY.

Norton L. Goldsmith, one of the best known attorneys at the Louisville bar, died suddenly at his home there, Thursday.

Mr. Goldsmith's death came without the slightest warning to his friends and his family and almost no preparation for the sad event. Mr. Goldsmith was in court all the day before and the next several hours on the golf links at the Standard Club that afternoon.

He arose apparently in good health but was stricken shortly afterwards by an acute pain in the side. He grew rapidly worse and died within two hours, despite every effort upon the part of the attending physicians to resuscitate him.

Chicago, Ill.—"I suffered from a female weakness and stomach trouble, and I went to the store to get a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, but the clerk did not want to let me have it—he said it was no good and wanted me to try something else, but knowing all about it I insisted and finally got it, and I am so glad I did, for it has cured me."

"I know of so many cases where women have been cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound that I can say to every suffering woman if that medicine does not help her, there is nothing that will."—Mrs. JANETZKI, 2908 Arch St., Chicago, Ill.

This is the age of substitution, and women who want a cure should insist upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound just as this woman did, and not accept something else on which the druggist can make a little more profit.

Women who are passing through this critical period or who are suffering from any of those distressing ills peculiar to their sex should not lose sight of the fact that for thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which is made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills. In almost every community you will find women who have been restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Hanna's Green Seal

"The Made-to-Wear Paint"

If you expect to do any painting, you are interested—you should be in the quality of the paint to be used.

In any given job of painting, labor represents practically two-thirds, material one-third the cost.

It stands to reason that with so much expense in labor, the enduring quality of the paint is all important.

Why have the painting done unless the protection and durability of the job is sought?

How is one to determine the true value and obtain paint that may be depended upon for durability?

HANNA'S GREEN SEAL PAINT IS NOT A SECRET. This paint has the printed formula on every package.

The makers have confidence and take pride in the quality and tell the public the composition of the paint.

IS THIS OF ANY VALUE TO YOU? IT OUGHT TO BE.

MRS. NATION DEAD

Carrie Nation, the Kansas saloon smasher, died Friday. There is no cause of death. For several months Mrs. Nation had been in poor health.

Mrs. Carrie Nation was born in Kentucky in 1846. Her maiden name was Carrie Moore, and as a girl it is said she was absolutely fearless. In her early life she married a man addicted to the use of intoxicants, which created in her an intense aversion to the saloon. When he died she determined to devote her life to the suppression of the liquor traffic. Later she moved to Kansas and married David Nation who sympathized with her principles.

Mrs. Nation's first saloon smashing was done in the barroom of the Carey Hotel in Wichita, December 27, 1909. She was arrested and remained in jail several days before she was released on bond.

On January 21, 1911, armed with her favorite hatchet, Mr. Nation made another raid in Wichita. This time she smashed two saloons.

During the next three months Mrs. Nation surprised the saloonkeepers in various Kansas towns, appearing unheralded and leaving a trail of ruined barroom and fixtures where ever she went.

Many saloonkeepers became terror-stricken when the militant prophetess appeared.

The Modern Wash-day

Time was when The Wash was a weekly nightmare, wash-day dinner a by-word.

The New Perfection Oil Cook-stove has changed all that. Once the wash-boiler is on the stove, it leaves you free to attend to the dinner or any other work.

You can move a New Perfection where you please and light it in a moment. It requires no attention after that. A single gallon of oil lasts all three burners seven hours or more. No coal or wood to carry; no fire to feed; no soot nor ashes. It keeps a kitchen or laundry cool and clean. It cooks to perfection, with the least trouble and expense.

New Perfection
Oil Cook-stove

Made with 1, 2 and 3 burners, with long, tortoise blue enameled chambers. (Standardly finished throughout.) The 2- and 3-burner models can be had with or without a cabinet top, which is fitted with deep shelves, lower racks, etc.
